Text about the reform and ideology of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan Ten years ago, the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan (ISU), a breakaway from the Islamic Revival Party (IRP) with the aim of creating a national Islamic party, was founded in January 2003 in Tashkent. One of the main theses of the Islamic State of Uzbekistan (ISI) is that "the unification of Uzbek Muslims is a natural process." And it is this association that is the goal of the movement. In particular, an article published in September 2009 says: "Uzbek Muslims are part of the Muslim world that needs to be united." The article also states that the movement will be "a uniter of believing Muslims based on the idea of 'tawhid', which would mean uniting only those Uzbeks who share the views of 'tawadi' (according to the teachings of Islam). The goal for which the Islamic State of Uzbekistan (or ISU) was created was to recruit more Muslims into the ranks of the movement. Today, a third of all Muslim fanatics around the world are members of the ISU. This is most likely due to political reasons. The ISU Islamic message is not the only source through which the Islamic State is trying to attract supporters. In addition, the ISU uses its propaganda through the media, or even mass ultra-nationalist movements such as the Taliban. This form of propaganda is gradually gaining more and more followers, threatening organizations such as the Islamic Revival. Despite the fact that Islam is the official religion in Uzbekistan, many religious figures do not approve of it. For example, the Mufti of Uzbekistan, his chairman of DUMER in Russia, expressed concern in an interview with AIF that IS is using religion to attract people. According to the Mufti, "The Islamic State on the territory of Uzbekistan is an attempt to unite Muslim believers." Meanwhile, some of the most respected religious leaders, such as, for example, the muftis of Fergana, Andijan, Samarkand and others, say the opposite. "Islamic States" does not exist
